AUGUSTA, Aug. 31. State Detective Ira M. True returned from Boston by boat this morning, bringing John J. Donovan, aged 14, one of the boys implicated in the robbery of G. S. Burleigh's house at Vassalboro in July. Donovan was bound over to the September grand jury. At the hearing he told the same story as two others now in custody, that the others did the robbery while he stood outside. This makes two witnesses against each of the three, and assures their conviction. Out of forty-four prisoners in the county jail at Augusta, twenty are held to await the action of the grand jury, the largest number in recent years.

THROUGH A BRIDGE.

Terrible Accident on the Boston and Albany Road.

Engine and Five Cars Precipitated into the River.

Five Reported Killed and Nine Injured.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Aug. 31. A terrible accident to the western express No. 10 of the Boston and Albany railroad, due at Springfield at 1.15, happened at the second railroad bridge east of Chester this afternoon. The bridge collapsed, letting the train through into the river below. Five persons are reported killed and nine injured. Engineer Horton and fireman Mitchell are among the dead. Five cars went through. The train consisted of a buffet car, dining car and three sleepers and two ordinary coaches, and was in charge of conductor John Sough. The bridge was over the west branch of the Westfield river.

Two Wrecking Trains

left Springfield immediately after the accident. On the latter train were Medical Examiner Beck and Dr. Seelye, of Springfield. The injured are being cared for by the people of Chester. The engine was No. 4, one of the largest passenger engines in the service. The train was running at an ordinary rate of speed, as it left Albany on time, and no danger was feared until the moment the bridge sank under the weight of the locomotive. The river-bed is some ten or twelve feet below the bridge. The engine went through first and five palace cars were piled upon it, one above another.

The bridge had been built fifteen years and had a span of 150 feet. It had been recently repaired and had not been properly braced to withstand the weight of a heavy train. The ill-fated train was one of the fastest expresses on the B. & A. road. It carried the largest engine and best cars of any train running west of Springfield.

SUNDAY OPENING.

Judge Goggin Refuses to Set a Date for Hearing.

CHICAGO, Aug. 31. A sensational scene was enacted in court to-day, when Judges Goggin, Dunne and Brentano attempted to decide whether the injunction should stand restraining the World's Fair directors from closing the Exposition gates on Sunday. Judges Dunne and Brentano hold that the injunction should be dissolved, while Judge Goggin holds exactly the contrary. Judge Goggin is the one before whom the motion to dissolve was made. Judges Brentano and Dunne were invited by him to sit en banc, the three to hear the case jointly; in view of the importance of the issues at stake before either of his colleagues could announce their views in opposition. When the court opened to-day Judge Goggin promptly forestalled them with an Unprecedented Move.

He notified the clerk to enter an order to continue the case for 60 days. Judge Dunne, to whom the reading of the majority opinion had been entrusted, insisted on his right to do so. He read the opinion and Judge Goggin renewed his attempt to grant a continuance. Ex-Judge Moran, representing the exposition company, addressed the Court, referring to the attempted continuance as "Judicial anarchy."

Judges Brentano and Dunne induced Judge Goggin to leave the bench and a private conference was held by the three judges. After the conference Judges Brentano and Dunne returned to the bench and announced that Judge Goggin no longer desired them to sit with him. They thereupon retired with considerable suppressed feeling, apparently leaving Judge Goggin to himself. Judge Goggin then entered an order overruling the motion to dissolve and refused ex-Judge Moran's request to set a date for hearing a motion to vacate that order.

Reports from Cholera Districts.

VIENNA, Aug. 31. There are five patients in the hospital here with choleraic symptoms. It is officially announced that four more districts in Galacia are infected with cholera. Cholera returns from Hungary indicate that habitual drunkards are the first and greatest sufferers from cholera, and that only a few women and children have succumbed to the disease.

Proved to be Cholera.

LONDON, Aug. 31. The epidemic in the Lincolnshire seaport, Grimsby, has been declared by the officials to be Asiatic cholera. The last victim of the disease was a woman who died last Tuesday. Several other cases before have ended fatally. Yesterday a seaman died from cholera aboard a Grimsby steamer in the harbor of Stromness, Scotland.

Sixty Thousand Miners Resume Work.

LONDON, Aug. 31. More than sixty thousand miners resumed work in South Wales to-day. Their return means practically a collapse of the strike in South Wales and Monmouthshire. Some 40,000 men still hold out. It is understood that the men who returned to work have not been granted the 20 per cent. advance for which they struck.

Castine News.

Our correspondent writes: At a town meeting held on the afternoon of August 10th, a good sum of money was raised for the purpose of obtaining a present for the cruiser Castine. A committee consisting of Mr. William Witherle, Dr. Wheeler, Mr. John Rea, Mr. Charles Noyes and Mr. C. H. Hooper was chosen to decide upon what it should be.

A game of base ball was played at the fort last Saturday afternoon between the Belfast nine and the Castine town nine. The score was eight to twenty-four in favor of the Castines.

BAR HARBOR.

Great Storm Prevents a Most Brilliant Event

September is Expected to be a Lively Month.

[Special Correspondence Whig and Courier.]

BAR HARBOR, Aug. 31. Old Boreas played lively antics on Mt. Desert Tuesday. He was not in ill temper enough to do much damage, but his frolics were sufficient to keep people indoors and lament over the pleasures they had planned. It was the night set for the Turkish minister's fete on Bar Island, but although the rain had ceased before dark and the moon shone from a clear sky, the wind was something frightful, and no sane person would have ventured into a boat.

Mavroyeni Bey had purchased about a thousand Japanese lanterns to decorate the pretty club house where the festivities were to have been, and there was also a large box containing wonderful fireworks, such as sea-serpents, dragons, etc., which were to be scattered over the bay, and also fire to be burned under the water. The festivities did not come off Wednesday as at first planned, on account of the Kebo dance, which was to be a grand affair, but it will doubtless be given Friday evening. It must be soon, as the genial diplomat has arranged for a visit to Lenox next week.

A Wrecked Schooner

lies on the rocks of Burnt Porcupine Island to-day. It was the one used to carry stone for the construction of the breakwater and it was driven by the gale of last night to the place where only the tip of its bowsprit is now visible. Captain Johnson was in charge. Four of the crew took to the dory and were blown by the hurricane to Sorrento, where they stayed all night and returned Wednesday morning. It was a narrow escape, as they realize. Everybody felt a shiver of horror when they saw evidences of a wreck and the fact that no lives were lost is truly wonderful. The only damage reported in the village was the shattering of a few signs and the uprooting of several small trees.

At Edgemere one of the beautiful cottages owned by Mr. T. F. Musgrave, of New York, but occupied this season by Mrs. J. V. D. Pruyn, also of New York, Mrs. Erving Winslow gave a charming programme of readings Tuesday morning, before an interested audience. After the readings there was a pretty luncheon party in honor of Mrs. Winslow. Next Thursday she will be heard again at the residence of Dr. Hasket Derby, of Boston.

Miss Adelaide Detchon, a talented young American girl, who has been abroad several years, is now in Bar Harbor, where she

Will Give a Series of Recitals.

Miss Detchon comes from the large cities of the Old World with medals, complimentary letters and columns of printed praise of her genius. She sings and recites, is wonderfully fascinating in face and manner and is evidently bound to succeed in her native land. On Thursday she will give a private recital at Steepway, where the Emerys, of Cincinnati, are living this summer, and the next day at a similar affair the public will be invited.

Wednesday morning at Eden Hall, where the Musgraves are passing the summer, Dr. S. Weir Mitchell, of Philadelphia, and Prof. Edward Graham Dayes, of Baltimore, read from their own writings to a large audience. The proceeds of the morning will go toward the fund already started to preserve Fort Raleigh on Roanoke Island.

Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Welch, of New York, Mr. Joseph Y. Gilbert, of Milwaukee, Mr. and Mrs. W. Wyman and Miss Wyman, of Baltimore, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Peabody, Mrs. Herbert Dumaresq and family, of Boston, have arrived at the Louisburg for a month.

Ex-Governor Carroll, of Maryland, gave an

Elaborate Dinner to Forty Guests

at Kebo Monday evening.

Mr. Charles How, of Boston, entertained a large party Tuesday night.

Mrs. A. Bleecker Banks, of Albany, who is at Malvern for the season, has been at Poland Springs with a party of friends for a brief visit. Mrs. Banks' daughter, Mrs. William Lawrence Greene, is among the most popular of the young married women who come to Bar Harbor. She has arranged the season's dinner-dances at Kebo, has entertained largely at her lovely home, is an expert horsewoman and a most successful angler. She is enthusiastic over the latter sport.

People are predicting that September is going to be a great month for Bar Harbor. The fact that this is said every year at this time does not prevent the majority from believing it will be true this season. The cottagers will, of course, stay, but the hotels will probably be rather deserted by another week. There can be no two opinions as to the beauty of the place in the early autumn when the bracing air makes driving so delightful, and it seems a pity that tourists must hasten back to the noisy, hot city.

Miss Alida Chanler and Miss Margaret Chanler, of New York, are among the guests at Rodicks. They are sisters of Mr. Chanler, who married Amelie Rives, the eccentric writer of lurid love tales.

Prof. O. C. Marsh, of Yale College, is a late arrival at the Malvern. At the same hotel are Mr. and Mrs. Diaz Albertini, of Texas.

CAMP BENSON.

Close of the Muster—The Grand Ball.

Our correspondent writes: The muster at Camp Benson closed with a grand ball on Monday night.

During the day, between two and three hundred of the Universalist society of Bangor were on the camp ground, having come out on the Hersey excursion.

The day was fine and the party enjoyed themselves dancing in the pavilion or sailing on the lake. A number remained over night to attend the ball.

There was quite a panic after the excursionists had left, when some of the ladies saw a boat floating out on the lake, minus oars or oarsman. At once the crowd about the shore, talked loud and fast of drowning accidents. A young man jumped into a boat and began to pull out into the lake. He had pulled but a few strokes, however, when a figure appeared in the boat and a roguish laugh greeted the anxious friends ashore. The young man had lain down to enjoy a drift, the wind was blowing so high, and hearing the voices on shore concluded to keep still and enjoy the fun till the rescue party started. His arrival on shore was greeted by about an equal division of smiles and frowns, for all decided it to be a too "practical joke."

Tuesday morning the exodus began. Tents and loads of furniture were packed and started homeward. When the storm began many were on the road and got severely drenched.

Quite a number of the cottages will be occupied for a month longer by families from the neighboring towns, who enjoy the after-muster quiet and take advantage of the fine autumn weather to rusticate at this pleasant resort.

The encampment just closed has been the pleasantest ever held at this place. At least this is the verdict of the majority of the regular Camp Bensonites.

The music has been good and the entertainment has been as successful as could be expected.

The new headquarters proved itself a necessary addition and will be more generally used as a place for holding meetings in coming musters.

A large number of new names have been added to the association, among them Gov. Cleaves, ex-Gov. Selden Connor and Dept. Commander Cushing.

A number of building lots have been sold. Mr. Ross, of Jamaica Plains, Mass, will build a pretty cottage on the annex, this fall, and probably quite a number of new buildings will be put up before another year.

The Association will give a lot for the S. of V., if they will build barracks here.

Caterer Jones gave the best satisfaction at the dining room, and there was no grumbling among the guests at Camp Benson Inn.

Col. Bridge was called the finest uniformed and most popular officer we ever had in command.

The annual meeting will be held at Camp Benson, the second Saturday in September.

Determined to Die.

With cool determination to make a successful attempt at suicide, Edward Hart, 47 years of age, a married man, living at 430 North Fourth street, Philadelphia, inserted a piece of rubber tubing into his mouth, the other end of which had been fastened over an opened gas burner in a room at 320 North Eighth street, and waited for death to come quietly and quickly.

The reason he failed, it was subsequently learned, when the case was investigated by the Eighth District police, was because the tubing was split at the end over the burner, and as much gas escaped into the well ventilated room as he inhaled. But Hart would have died in any event had he been left to carry out his own will.

Hart went to the furnished room house at No. 320 North Eighth street on Monday. He was rational and appeared to be in ordinarily good circumstances. His landlady yesterday morning noticed a strong odor of gas, which seemed to come from the room he was occupying. She called to him to ask whether the storm had blown out the gas flame.

"No, it's all right now," he replied without hesitation.

Later in the day the query was again made, for the smell of gas pervaded the hall to a marked degree.

"It must come from another room," Hart answered. "The gas here is turned off."

An hour later, the landlady's suspicion that all was not right in Hart's room was confirmed. She asked a policeman to break in the door. He saw Hart lying on the floor, wrapped in a sheet, with the tubing between his teeth, slowly inhaling gas.

Another officer was called and Hart was aroused from his stupor. He was walked to the Eighth District Station House. Afterward he was admitted to the Philadelphia Hospital.

Dr. Fritz stated that he thought Hart was demented and accounted for his actions in that way. His farewell message to his family did not indicate such a condition. He briefly said good bye to his wife and children, intimated that he was "tired of it all," and although he had failed to kill himself with laudanum which had sickened him, he was sure that gas would prove effective.

Butting Against the Record.

And the repeal bill would have passed if not a single Republican had voted for it.—New York World.

It is useless to expect the World to make an honest statement of fact in connection with the vote of the House, but at the same time it is difficult to understand what it hopes to accomplish by this gross and inexcusable misrepresentation when the record in the House is public property. Everyone who has taken the pains to examine the votes in the House knows that the repeal bill would have failed had the Republicans withheld their support as the Democrats would have done with the circumstances reversed. It is true that on the direct vote on the repeal bill the Democrats succeeded in getting a very small majority of the party to support the bill, but had the question been left entirely to the Democrats they would have revived the old Bland law by a majority of nine votes. The last amendment submitted by the free silver men was the substitution of the Bland law for the Wilson bill and on this amendment the vote was as follows:

Republican vote for Bland law........ 15
Republican vote against Bland law.110
Republican majority against Bland law........................95
Democratic vote for Bland law........112
Democratic vote against Bland law........................103
Democratic majority for Bland law 9

The Republicans not only gave a large majority vote in each instance against the silver movement, but absolutely saved the repeal bill from a humiliating defeat, a fact very clearly demonstrated in the official record quoted above. The World has had a good deal to say of late on the duty of dropping mere partisanship in the interest of a patriotic solution of the currency question. It might be well if that organ would preach less and try and introduce a little real honesty into its own columns in its treatment of public questions.

Pensions and Partisanship.

A Washington despatch says: Ever since the establishment of medical boards to examine applicants for pensions down to the beginning of the Administration, such boards have been non-partisan. Under Republican Administrations two of the three members of each board were Republicans and one was a Democrat, and under the first Administration of Grover Cleveland these proportions were reversed. But Hoke Smith has changed all that. He is of the opinion, and his opinion, of course, is also that of the Democrat Commissioner of Pensions, that "there has been too much partisanship" in these boards, which are composed solely of members of the medical profession in good standing, and it has therefore been prescribed and ordained in order to prevent partisan medical examinations that all the members of every medical examining board shall also be members of the Democratic party, except in cases where it may be found impossible to muster three Democratic doctors. In such cases the appointment of one Republican member of the board will be tolerated.

It is also reported that Democrats who were members of such boards heretofore will not be eligible for appointment under the new dispensation. By a strict observance of the new regulations, it will be perceived the boards will be purged of all members who might be hampered by precedents, experience or knowledge of the pension laws and regulations in carrying out the hostile, severe and arbitrary instructions and rulings of the new Administration. Thus far, it is said, only about three in every 100 appointments of members of the new boards have been bestowed upon Republicans. It is thought that "friction will be avoided" by the new plan. The new order of things seems not to have been generally understood by Senators and Representatives, whose recommendations are usually followed in making these appointments. Most of them have been in the habit of recommending one Republican for each board, as was the practice under Mr. Cleveland's former Administration. They are now called upon to select three Democrats. It is understood that some of the Northern Democratic Representatives are not enamored of the new policy, which they assert will be harmful to the Democratic party in many Northern districts.

What Protection Has Done for Sanford.

The Sanford Ledger gives a short, but very pithy protection sermon in the following statement of facts concerning the development of that town: Protection to American industries will henceforth be the watchword of the Ledger. Believing as we do in the principles of a protective tariff, we realize the fact that we can no longer consistently conduct an independent newspaper in Sanford, which town might better be called Protectionville, for all of its remarkable growth since the election of the Harrison administration, is, as a writer in the Boston Journal puts it "conceded on all hands to be due to the protective tariff."

We have had ample opportunity to witness the practical benefits of protection to American industries as demonstrated here and are firmly convinced that under a free trade policy Sanford's industries would be crippled and its business interests paralyzed. The Sanford mills were established in 1867 by Thomas Goodall, who employed 40 hands. To-day when it has been found necessary for the first time in their history to suspend operations, over 700 hands are thrown out of employment. The Goodall Worsted Company, which is operating only in the yarn departments, having 100 looms idle, employs when running all departments from 300 to 400 hands.

But the most remarkable feature in the development of Sanford is seen by a glance at the census. In 1880 there was a population of 800, this had increased in 1890 to 1600, then came the enactment of the McKinley bill and the town which had gained 1000 inhabitants in 10 years gained 747 in two. The manufacturing facilities were greatly increased and a boom struck the town. Over 150 houses were erected in one year and land increased three times in value, electric lights were introduced and an electric railroad, connecting Sanford with Springvale, was built, while many other business enterprises were rendered successful and farmers for fifteen miles around found an enlarged market for their produce.

Sanford was bright with life and activity that is seen in those places where the future holds the promise of still better times for those already prosperous. After the election of 1892, however, the mill owners realized that a "condition and not a theory" confronted them and they began to feel their way. The increase of 747 in population in two years was cut down to an increase of 67 in the six months following election. These facts in connection are all sufficient to convince any intelligent citizen that this...

ford's industries to be successful must be protected, and if this is true of Sanford, it is true of the entire country.

Joking After the Battle.

[Washington Post, Aug. 30.]

If a stenographic report could have been secured of a merry passage at arms between Messrs. Reed and Burrows on the one side and Messrs. Allen and Bryan on the other just after the House adjourned yesterday afternoon, one of the funniest incidents of the silver fight would have been presented in much of its brilliancy. Some of the remarks might have been objected to as unparliamentary, but unanimous consent to print could doubtless been had. Reed sat down in the seat across the aisle from Burrows and Allen stopped to exchange a few words. The trio was instantly surrounded by a party of newspaper men, who keenly enjoyed the fun, which was fast and furious for a few minutes. Reed and Burrows were chafing Allen upon the desertions from the silver ranks, especially among the members from the Southern States, naming some of them.

"So and so," (naming one of the unexpected votes for repeal) said Burrows, "evidently believes in 'hollering' with the biggest crowd."

"All he wants to know, all that any one of them wants to know," said Reed, "is that the administration really desires a thing, and they are convinced it ought to be done."

"Yes, that's it," assented Allen. "Once you convince one of our fellows, and he stands right up to the rack."

"They came tumbling over each other so fast it was really amusing to watch them," said one of the Republicans.

"The gold bugs not only got away with the silver bugs, but the straddle bugs as well," remarked Mr. Reed.

"I do believe," said Allen, "that the President has cornered the backbone of the Democratic party."

"Didn't require great outlay of capital to conduct that operation, did it?" drawled Reed, at which a shout went up. "He could do that and still keep upon a gold basis."

Bryan came along and was halted by a question from Burrows:

"Do you know what the Democratic platform means now?"

And Reed, referring to Bryan's plea in his famous speech that Cleveland would "order one more charge," said, "This is a Marengo without a Dessaix."

Bryan good naturedly retorted that Boutelle was responsible for the slaughter of the silver hosts. "He broke up the drummer boy's business in his speech Saturday night," said Bryan, "and behold the result!"

"This is a sad day for the people," sarcastically observed Reed to Allen. "What has become of all your friends who represent the people?"

"The people don't appear to have much show here, that's a fact," responded Allen.

"Come on, Allen; let's leave this crowd," said Bryan, as he moved away, and the symposium came to an end, greatly to the regret of the delighted listeners.

This Company is organized under Maine laws, thus making stock fully paid and non-assessable, and with no personal liability to stockholders.

Our newly invented process enables us to make White Lead in one-quarter the time and with one-tenth the capital required under the old way. Our product is finer, goes further and rubs out smoother than the standard White Lead of commerce.

The character of the Board of Directors, being all Boston business men, guarantee a business-like management of the company's affairs.

The present financial depression has forced prices of best stocks much below their intrinsic values, and the past sixty days has witnessed unusual purchases of odd lots of stock by small investors.

In common with other concerns we have found it difficult to get accommodation at the banks to meet our bills, and in order to secure ready money we hereby offer the public, the opportunity to buy our CAPITAL STOCK at $2.50 per share, par value $10.

True Medical Progress,

Is that which tends to alleviate human suffering by disinfecting the organism and vitalizing the mainspring of life. While the body is charged with POISONOUS, DESTRUCTIVE, IRRITABLE SECRETIONS, no prescription yet discovered can possibly eliminate. Why then should we continue the effort to coerce rather than expel. Dr. S. F. Conant, of Skowhegan, Me., has invented a method of simple, luxurious fumigation and bathing, called Andrew's Baths, and we advise the profession to watch results whether in family use or in the hands of experts, before it goes entirely into the administration of the common people, as is sure to result from their prejudiced inattention. The results from this treatment regardless of the names given disease symptoms, should interest everybody, especially the medical profession.

Exercises at Portland Convention Thursday.

PORTLAND, Aug. 31. At the afternoon session of the State Christian Endeavor convention addresses were delivered by Rev. E. B. Hellon on work in Bible societies. A paper on bringing young women to Christ was read by Grace M. Coburn, of Skowhegan, and on a kindred subject by R. A. Jordan, of Bangor. Rev. Frank M. Lamb, of Kennebunk, spoke on winning souls. Rev. C. H. Daniels, of New York, made a missionary address. Miss Hattie Millett, missionary from India, gave a thrilling account of her work. At the First Baptist church, one square away, a junior rally was held with addresses by Flora B. Berry, Mrs. F. E. Clarke and others.

To-night Rev. T. N. Musgrove, of Biddeford, presented the State banner which was formally accepted by State Secretary J. W. Stevenson. There were addresses by Rev. Martin Summerbell, D. D., of Lewiston, and Rev. F. E. Clarke, founder of the society, who was received with the highest enthusiasm and spoke in a most interesting and enthusiastic way of the needs and aims of the society.

FROM ROCKLAND.

A Severe Accident in a Quarry—Vessel Heard From.

ROCKLAND, Aug. 31. S. E. Shephard, of the S. E. & H. L. Shephard Co., of Rockport, leading lime manufacturers, while in their quarry yesterday afternoon, was caught by the gearing of the pumping machinery, and thrown down and drawn into the cogs, dreadfully crushing his arm and shoulder. He will recover.

A private telegram to I. L. Snow & Co., owners of the schooner Catawamteak, Captain Rowe, states that the vessel arrived at Southport, N. C., yesterday, having lost sails, boats and had her cabin stove by the recent hurricanes. The Catawamteak left Hayti, August 5th, and fears were felt for her safety. Other Rockland vessels remain to be heard from.

FOURTEEN KILLED.

Terrible Wreck of Chicago Express Train.

Bridge Collapses at Chester, Mass., Over Westfield River.

Cars Smashed and Occupants Shockingly Mutilated.

Worst Disaster Ever Known on Boston & Albany Road.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Aug. 31. The Chicago limited express train from Boston broke through a frail iron bridge on the Boston & Albany railroad 11½ miles east of Chester about 12.30 to-day. Four Wagner cars were crushed, killing at least 13 persons and fatally injuring several others. At least a score are badly hurt. The wreck is the worst ever known on the railroads. The locomotive passed over the structure, but was smashed.

The buffet, two sleepers and dining car were smashed to kindling when they struck a stream twenty feet below. Two day coaches and a smoker in the rear did not leave the track. It is believed that two more bodies are in the ruins.

The List of Dead:

Miss Emma Deterly, Columbus, O.
B. C. Ives, Chicago.
T. Everett, and Chadwick Palmer, express messengers.
James McMasters, Springfield, brakeman.
J. H. Murray, Greenbush, New York, baggage-master.
George H. Morse, Boston, Wagner car conductor.
J. C. Stackpole, Hartford, Conn.
R. C. Hitchcock, Bellows Falls, Vt.
J. E. DeWitt, Portland, Me., president of the Union Mutual Life Insurance Company.
Thomas Keller, Boston, blanket manufacturer.
Miss Susie Cotting, Boston.
Mrs. C. Blapham, Philadelphia.
Mrs. J. S. Winchell, Oneida, N. Y.
An unknown woman, plainly dressed, apparently about 25 years old.

The train was 7 minutes late at Chester. Railroad hands say it was going 20 miles an hour when it struck the first of the two spans across Westfield river. Many of the dead were horribly mutilated.

J. E. Dewitt, of Portland, Me., was reading a magazine. M. W. Kirk, of Chicago, started to sit with him, but seeing he was absorbed, excused himself and went into the rear car, and was saved.

Wounded.

Mrs. Rev. Dr. Llewellyn Pratt, Norwich, Ct.
Robert Cuckson, Boston.
Murry Graves, Boston.
Ethel Carson, Dalton.
John D. Carson, Dalton.
Louis Bachaman, Boston.
Rose Stephens, Springfield.
Mary Sade, Springfield.
John Platt, Rivertown, N. J.
Mrs. Dr. Alice Little, Brooklyn.
M. F. Leahran, Fall River.
Mrs. James T. Eldredge, Boston.
Mrs. H. E. Whitney, Cleveland, Ohio.
Mrs. J. N. Winchester, West Roxbury.
Sumner Cummings, Worcester.
Mrs. Sumner Cummings, Worcester.
Wellesley Porter, Boston.
Arthur William, Lenox.
Frank Lange, Chicago.
Winthrop Wade, Boston.
Mrs. Helen Rich, Pittsfield.
Walter Hawkins, Pittsfield.
Lewis Mitchell, Albany.
Wm. Horton, Albany, engineer.
J. Waldron Johnson, Boston, porter.
John Emerson, brakeman, Boston.
E. B. Adams, Holyoke.
Mrs. Avery, Holyoke.

The bridge looks as though it had been thrown from the abutments rather than broken down.

It is thought the blow of the locomotive almost struck the bridge and sent it bounding off its foundation into the river. Repairs were going on to strengthen the bridge to enable it to carry an increased weight of rolling stock.

Railroad officials are confident that it did not fall from weakness. There is no evidence of carelessness of the men such as leaving tools around to help derail the train. Mr. Hawkins has a tentative theory which agrees with the supposition that the locomotive, a heavy six wheeled one, struck the bridge a harder blow than it could bear.

FALL RIVER MILLS.

The Situation Outlined by a Prominent Manufacturer.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Aug. 31. The manufacturers of the city note no improvement of any kind in the situation. One of the oldest and most prominent among them gave this outline to the press to-day: We cannot run our mills without money no matter whether they are in debt or not. The business of the local clearing house has fallen off, 5 per cent. in three weeks and until the money market is easier we cannot get funds to buy cotton and pile up goods in storehouses.

"To run a forty thousand spindle mill on the present prices for labor, cotton and cloth will cause us a loss of $800 a week. To shut down the mill will entail a loss of $300 per week. If the operatives can meet us half way and bear a portion of the loss and put us on an equal footing with other centers we can probably run along until money grows more plentiful. We cannot do it now and a strike is not going to help us do it."

GREAT NANCY HANKS.

Goes a Fast Mile at Fleetwood Park—Other Events.

NEW YORK, Aug. 31. At Fleetwood Park to-day Nancy Hanks made a race against time for a $5,000 purse, with Budd Doble on the seat, and was driven to beat the track record of 2.09¾. Adam Forepaugh, the pace maker, was half a dozen lengths behind at the start and could not catch up.

The time by quarters was 31½, 1.02½, 1.34¾, 2.06¾.

The 2.16 trot, Fannie Wilcox, b m, won.

FARMINGTON RACES.

The Closing Day's Events There.

FARMINGTON, Aug. 31. The closing day's races of the Franklin County Breeders' Association had about the same attendance as yesterday. The four year old stakes had three starters and was won by G. M. Vose's blk g, Dan L., best time 3.00. Nine two year olds started in that stake. It was won by A. J. Lincott's ch f, Fannie Wilkes; best time 1.38, half mile.

Senate.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31. Mr. Frye, of Maine offered a resolution which was adopted, directing the Secretary of the Treasury to furnish to the Senate a statement showing for the last two years the exports and imports carried under the several flags engaged in the foreign carrying trade.

Mr. Cockrell, Democrat, introduced a concurrent resolution directing the Secretary of the Treasury to issue certificates, not to exceed twenty per cent. of the amount of gold coin and bullion in the treasury, and to use and expend the same in payment of interest on the public debt, or any other demand, liability or obligation of the United States. He said the passage of the resolution would allow the issue of $25,000,000 to $35,000,000 in gold certificates.

The resolution was, at his own request, laid on the table for the present.

The Senate proceeded to the consideration of the House bill for the repeal of the Sherman act and Mr. Walcott, Republican, addressed the Senate in opposition to it.

A CONSPIRACY

Which was Nipped in the Bud by a Timely Act.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 31. The steamer Alameda, just arrived from Sydney, via Honolulu, brings news from the latter place of a conspiracy of Royalists having been arranged to restore the Queen on the 18th by firing the city, dynamiting building, and in the panic capturing the government buildings. The government was apprised of the plot and Admiral Skerrett prepared to land forces and assist in maintaining order. This frustrated the plans of the conspirators who had enlisted three hundred natives as soldiers for the plan and told them the United States forces would help them. No public alarm was created at the time and all continues quiet.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

The Country Threatened by Tariff Tinkering.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31. The decision of the Committee on Ways and Means yesterday to give hearings to persons interested in the preparation of a tariff bill between the fourth and twentieth of September does not exhaust the intentions of the committee in that regard. Chairman Wilson has been instructed to present a resolution for consideration by the House, authorizing the committee, through its various sub-committees, to pursue an investigation of the several subjects over which they have especial charge. The expenses of these investigations are to be paid out of the contingent fund of the House upon warrant of the chairman of the committee.

Bound Over for Horse Stealing.

Officer Davis, of Old Town, brought to this city yesterday noon Alexander Brown, alias Alexander Broano, and locked him up in jail. Brown was before the Municipal Court in Old Town, yesterday forenoon on the charge of horse stealing from Mr. Appleton, of Orland, and was bound over to the fall term of the Supreme Judicial Court, under $500 bonds. He failed to get bail and was committed to jail.

The horse was stolen Tuesday night and Brown was arrested Wednesday at Montague by an officer of that place, he having the team at that time and was taken to Old Town for trial. Brown has but recently been released from serving a term at State Prison for the same offence.

LOCAL MATTERS.

For Summer Outings.

THE DAILY WHIG will be sent to persons going out of town for any period of time and address changed as often as desired at 15 cents per week, postage paid.

The revenue cutter Levi Woodbury is in port.

"A Country Sport" company which appeared at the Opera House Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights left yesterday for Portland.

The fall term of the Maine State College has begun under favorable circumstances with a freshman class of fifty. More are expected soon.

The Maine Central excursions to Bar Harbor on Sundays during September will doubtless be largely patronized as they offer a pleasant day's outing at Maine's biggest and most famous resort.

The Board of Managers of the Kindergarten Association, will hold their regular monthly meeting this afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Charles Woodman, No. 53 Broadway. A full attendance is desired as business of importance is to be considered.

By an unfortunate error in our report of the art exhibit at The Norombega Mrs. Sweet's name was stated wrong. It should have been Mrs. Flora E. Sweet and the large and beautiful exhibit she has in the art department is admired by all who visit the hall.

The regular monthly conference meeting of the First Baptist church will be held in the chapel this evening when Rev. Mr. Kingsley, the newly elected pastor, will be present and will be pleased to meet as many members of the society and church as he can.

"The White Squadron" company which began a two night's engagement at the Opera House last night arrived in the city yesterday noon from Augusta, where the company played Wednesday night. From Bangor they go to Portsmouth, N. H., to play Saturday night and from there to New York City.

The officers of the School Department are settled in their new quarters in the voting room of Ward Six, in the basement of the High School building, and have placed a sign over the door which reads, "School Department," where Miss Snow, the superintendent, and the School Agent, S. P. Bradbury, may be found in regular office hours as heretofore.

John Mugan, of Pennsylvania, Frank Price, of Indiana, and John Walsh, of Ireland, were before the Municipal Court yesterday, on the charge of assault on Samuel Bradbury, of Passadumkeag, at the time Scribner & Smith's circus was at Passadumkeag. Walsh was discharged and the others were held in $300 bonds for their appearance at the February term of the Supreme Judicial Court. They could not get bonds and went to jail.

Maj. William Z. Clayton and Comrades William Earle, wife and sister, and A. B. Farnham, of the G. A. R., leave to-day on the 3.20 P. M. train for Greenville, where they will take the Canadian Pacific railway train for Indianapolis, Ind., to attend the G. A. R. encampment, which begins there next Tuesday. They expect to arrive there Monday morning. Comrade William Patterson and wife have already started for Indianapolis. Mrs. Patterson will attend the Woman's Relief Corps meetings.

At 11.35 o'clock last night, a fire alarm was rung in from box 73. The fire department had a chase to get to the scene, but finally arrived. The blaze was in a story and a half house occupied by Jeremiah Sabine and family, at the corner of Fruit street and Mt. Hope avenue. The house burned flat in short order. The fire caught about the chimney. Mrs. Sabine was aroused by cries of fire and had only time to get the children out. Mr. Sabine was out of town. A small amount of household goods was saved. The loss will be small, as the building was not valuable. Mrs. Sabine did not know about insurance. The fire made a bright blaze.

AMUSEMENTS.

"The White Squadron."

The theatrical attractions of fair week continued last evening with the first of two presentations of "The White Squadron," and the company was greeted by a very large audience which made the "standing room only" seem necessary. The audience was very pleasantly and interestingly entertained by the play and the players.

The plot of "The White Squadron" centers about the "Congress of Navies" at Rio Janeiro held for the purpose of protesting against the brigandage tolerated in Brazil and a love story is also evoked which materially adds to the interest of the play. There are several sensational scenes in the course of the four acts and they are well worked out.

The scenery is handsome and realistic and assists in no small measure in the good effort of the play. It represents Oncsta Da Silvera's home outside Rio Janerio, a public square in Rio Janerio, the Congress of Navies, a tableaux of the White Squadron and a monastery. Soldiers and sailors are introduced and there is considerable patriotic sentiment throughout the play, which creates enthusiasm.

The company is throughout a capable and well chosen one. Mr. Whitecar is an excellent "Capt. Staunton," and Mr. Burke a manly "Paulo de Silvera." Mr. Jullan's "Gen. Romaelo" was a strong bit of acting of a villianous character and Mr. Hall's "Horatio Doolittle Fritters" created a great deal of amusement. Miss Forrest as "Oncsta De Silvera," Miss Deagle as "Therese De Romaelo" and Miss Almoarino as "Hope Staunton" were admirable and the other roles were in good hands.

The concluding presentation will be given this evening and there will doubtless be another large audience present.

"Dr. Bill" Next Week.

The famous comedy "Dr. Bill" which has made the whole world laugh will constitute the attraction at the Opera House on Monday and Tuesday next.

This is the comedy with which Mr. French opened his new Garden Theatre, New York and it will have the advantage of the same careful attention to detail in its production here as that which characterized its production in New York.

Seventy-fifth Anniversary.

That staid, sterling and substantial Republican standard-bearer, the Eastport Sentinel, celebrates this week, the seventy-fifth year of its existence and presents its subscribers with a handsome souvenir of the occasion, in the shape of a beautifully printed booklet of 42 pages, giving an account of the origin and growth of the paper. The present proprietor, Mr. N. B. Nutt, who had previously been editor, purchased the paper in 1858, forty years ago, his predecessors having been Benjamin Folsom, Seth B. Mitchell, C. C. Tyler, J. W. Emery, and A. H. Close. In 1853 Mr. Nutt purchased Mr. Close's interest and has since continued the paper in a most creditable manner. There are many illustrations in the book, including views of the various offices occupied by H. B. Nutt & Son.

THE FAIR.

The Second Day of the Annual Exhibition.

Very Large Crowd of People Present.

The Races in the Afternoon at the Park.

Nelson Gives a Fast Mile Under Unfavorable Conditions.

In the forenoon at Maplewood yesterday the people amused themselves by looking at the exhibits, the horses, cattle, etc., and in wandering about the park. The weather was cool and generally pleasant and the fair grounds were resorted to by many, although the main attractions did not occur until afternoon.

A very large number of people came to the city from out of town yesterday by rail, steamer and carriage and the hotels were crowded. The streets presented a very lively appearance, especially in the afternoon when thousands were wending their way to Maplewood Park.

THE RACES.

Some Fast Time and Interesting Events.

The high wind made it rather disagreeable at the park yesterday afternoon, but in spite of this fact the races were hotly contested and the time fast, two more horses going into the list. The first event on the cards was for which there were ten entries and all of the horses came to the wire for the word with Haley at the pole. There was the usual amount of scoring and the driver of Harold M. was fined $20 for coming down ahead of the pole horse and was called to the stand to settle before he started. When the field got away Haley at once proceeded to open up a lead and he had everything his own way for the full mile. He finished an easy winner jogging under the wire in 2.28¼. Dr. Lord, Lady Franklin and Harold M. made a pretty drive for second place, but Harold M. was carried to a break and was beaten out at the finish by both of the other horses.

Second Heat.

It would be interesting to know on just what basis the judges run the "fine business." It is all right to punish the drivers if they do wrong, but all should be used alike. In the first heat Harold had to settle, for coming ahead of the pole horse, but in this heat the driver of Combine came down out of his position and ahead of the pole horse several times and escaped with a reprimand. The people want to see fair play in this matter. This was Haley's heat, but Lady Franklin pushed him hard all of the way. For the first half she laid right to his wheel and forced him home in 2.26¾. The four year old race record in this State is 2.25¾ so that Haley not only beat his own but all other records in his class. He is a coming horse and is sure to wind up the season with a low mark if nothing happens to him.

Third Heat.

Haley settled the race in this heat in 2.31¼. His record prior to this race was 2.32½ and his performance in this race, considering the high wind, was certainly remarkable. The second and third money was divided between Lady Franklin and Dr. Lord and fourth money went to Harold M. Following is the summary:

The 2.37 Class.

A field of nine horses started in this race with Jack Wyman at the pole, Mollie C., second, Rose L., third, Rosa Victor fourth, Topsy's Baby fifth, Dalrymple sixth, Jennie Rolfe seventh, Vinal Haven eighth and Camille ninth. After several warnings from the judges the horses were sent away in good form and on the first turn Rose L. went up to second place, but was beaten out by Jennie Rolfe at the quarter. Jack Wyman held an easy lead from wire to wire and came home in a jog with Jennie Rolfe, in second place. Topsy's Baby and Rosa Victor got the flag.

Second Heat.

Mollie C. did some sharp trotting in this heat. She beat Jennie Rolfe out for second place in the first half and was then sent for the leader. Jack Wyman trotted a pretty heat, without lifting his nose once, but his driver had to keep him going all of the time and he went under the wire a winner in 2.27¾. Mollie C. was a hot second and Jennie Rolfe in third place.

Third Heat.

For the first half it looked as though Jack Wyman would carry off the prize package in three straight and very easily too, but at the three-quarter pole Mollie C. came up with a rush. She set the clip so fast around the turn that Jack Wyman went into the air, making a bad break so that he finished a poor third. The driver of Mollie C. might have saved two or three seconds on his record and won the heat just the same, but he kept the mare going and went under the wire in 2.26½, thus placing another in the list.

Fourth Heat.

In this heat Jack Wyman sustained the confidence placed in his winning ability by taking the race after a hard fight. He collared the mare from the word and went to the quarter on her wheel, when he fell back on another of his bad breaks. At the half he was several lengths behind Mollie, but at the three-quarter pole he was again hanging to her wheel and beat her out home in a most exciting finish. Half way down the stretch it looked like a dead heat, but Jack had another link of speed in reserve and pushed his nose under the wire a winner in 2.26½. Mollie C. captured second money, Jennie Rolfe third and Rose L. fourth.

The 2.23 Class.

This was a contest for pacers and trotters and the side-wheelers were "in it." There were seven starters with St. Lawrence at the pole. It was a fine field of horses and they made a pretty heat. On the upper turn Ervin M. forged ahead, but Gypsy held him behind his shoulder, half and the ... pair. On the backside in the second Gypsy began to forge to the front and took the pole at the three-quarter mark. She came home fast and beat Ervin out by a good length in 2.20¾, with Bird a hot third closely followed by St. Lawrence and Fred Wilkes.

Second Heat.

In this heat Dustin was behind Ervin M., but could only land him in second place. There was much scoring and Ervin M., always comes for the word at full speed while Gypsy took matters easy thus reserving her strength for the heat. Ervin M. broke on the turn, but settled quickly and at the quarter was pushing the leader hard. At the half the horses were neck and neck, but on the last half Gypsy opened up a slight lead at the three-quarter pole and increased it coming home, finishing in 2.21¼.

Third Heat.

Gypsy had everything her own way in this heat. Ervin M. paced a pretty half with the leader, but failed to hold the clip and was beaten home for second place by Bird. It was a hot race in all of the heats although Gypsy could have paced even faster had it been necessary to win. Ervin M. got second money, Bird third and St. Lawrence fourth. Nelson's Fast Mile.

Between the heats Nelson was given a warming up mile in about 2.23 preparatory to his attempt to break the record on a half mile track. In his fast mile he was accompanied by Myrtle Peck on a running horse. Neither the day or track were favorable for record breaking and while the famous horse did not break his own record he did a mile in 2.12½, the fastest mile ever made over this track. On the first turn in the last half he made a slight skip, occasioned by a bad place in the track, but he settled down again very quickly and gave a beautiful exhibition heat. The time was as follows:

Quarter.	Half.	Three Quarters.	Mile.

Myrtle Peck.

This famous lady rider gave another interesting exhibition. In addition to the feats performed the day before she appeared on her high jumper and won applause for her fine riding.

To-day's Programme.

The programme for to-day will include the 2.45, 2.14, 3 minute, and 2.28 trotters and 2.30 pacers.

At The Norombega.

The exhibits at The Norombega were visited and inspected by many people yesterday afternoon and evening and all admired the display and arrangements. In the evening Wasgatt's orchestra rendered a fine programme which added greatly to the enjoyment of the visitors.

Notes.

Among the exhibits in the vegetable department was one that did not compete for premiums, which was made by the Maine State college. The display of various kinds of vegetables was large and very fine and a great credit to the institution.

One of the curiosities at the fair is a calf raised and owned by Mr. George Moulton, of Bradley, which is as devoid of hair as an elephant or rhinoceros, and which has the further peculiarity of having the feet of a pig.

RUN OVER BY CARS.

Joseph Socklexis Loses His Life at Old Town.

As a special train from Milo Junction over the Bangor & Aroostook railroad was coming into Old Town Wednesday night at 10 o'clock the cars passed over the body of Joseph Socklexis, an Old Town Indian, who had evidently been lying upon the track, killing him instantly, but the fatality was then unknown to the railroad men.

Not long afterwards a boy named Craig was coming down Middle street hill and discovered the body upon the track. He immediately ran and informed Deputy Sheriff Lancaster who at once went to the scene of the accident. The train had passed over the Indian's abdomen severing the body.

The remains were taken to Undertaker Rackliff's. Joseph Socklexis was formerly one of the most prominent Indians on the island and had represented the Penobscot tribe several years in the Maine Legislature. He was about fifty years of age and leaves a wife and one son. A coroner's jury was summoned yesterday morning by Coroner Lancaster. The City Marshal and others testified and the hearing was then adjourned to this morning at 8 o'clock.

WILD WEST SHOW.

Pawnee Bill Will Appear this Afternoon and Evening.

This afternoon and evening Pawnee Bill's Wild West Show will exhibit on the north side of Mt. Hope avenue west of Palm street and it is expected that it will be very interesting.

Among its features are an Indian museum with a band of Indians, Mexican hippodrome, pyrotechnic display, bucking bronchos and spotted mustangs, Miss May Lillie, the champion woman rifle shot, daring cowboys and rifle shots, racing steers and standing race, artillery race, Senor Francisco and his Vaqueros, Miss Bradden, the prairie queen, reproduction of the Mountain Meadow massacre, also the Wounded Knee fight, Indians attacking Trapper Tom's cabin, and the Fort Sill stage coach, a band of Bedouin Arabs, just added, wild riders of the Pampas.

All these will doubtless prove exciting and interesting. The street parade will start at 10 A. M. and the performances will begin at 2 and 8 P. M., the tents being open an hour earlier. The performances are exactly similar.

GAMES OF CHANCE(?)

Stopped by the Police on the Fair Grounds.

The so-called games of chance, which might be named games of certainty as far as the winning of the proprietor of the game is concerned, having commenced yesterday to take on an alarming degree of frequency, so Chief of Police Gilman decided to take a hand in the little game.

His officers were instructed to drive away from the fair grounds all of the skin-game artists who hover like vultures over their prey, and the orders were carried out to the letter yesterday. Every vulture was told to fly and he fled.

There will be no more fleecing of the innocents abroad if the police can prevent it. This action is to be heartily commended and many will in moments of calm reflection thank the Chief of Police that they have jingling coins and crisp bank bills in their pockets instead of a vacuum, as would have been the case had the hawks been allowed to flourish.

There were some thirty of these skin games in full blast and many of them were entirely new. Those who had new ones reaped a harvest while the old ones were doing a very appreciable business before the brass buttons called around. Complaint being made of the Maplewood House, by order of the Chief of Police it was also closed.

MALARIA

Half of all sicknesses are caused by Malaria. The poison comes out of the ground, fills the air and is breathed into the system. It is everywhere, though worse in damp or low places. Some towns have almost none, and some people never suffer with it. But nearly all have it sooner or later, often without knowing what it is that causes their bad feelings. Don't take Quinine or Arsenic, they only help for the moment and cause head troubles and mineral poisoning. Better by far fortify your system against Malaria with Dr. Baker's Grape Cure. Your dull headache, or neuralgia, or backache, or weakness, or aching bones, or "blues," or feverishness, or chills, are symptoms. If you have one or more of them drive out the poison with Grape Cure. This splendid vegetable medicine does not fill the bones with mineral poisons, mercury, etc. It acts gently but powerfully upon the stomach, liver and kidneys, purifies the blood and makes it impossible for Malaria to stay. Take it immediately and stop your bad feelings. It has cured many and it will you. Grape Cure is a pleasant tasting medical extract of Fresh Grapes, with Quassia Bark and is different from all other medicines. Sold by DRUGGISTS. $1.00.

BREWER LOCALS.

Mr. Webber, of Massachusetts, is visiting in the city.

Miss S. Agnes Woodbridge, of Auburn, is visiting in the city.

Miss Caroline Oakes, of Hancock, was in the city yesterday.

Mr. George Carlow has returned from Eddington pond, where he has been for a few months.

The pipe for the new sewer on Main street, above Chamberlain, has arrived and will soon be in place.

The three-masted schooner Hattie H. Barbour, a Brewer built vessel, is in port and is lying at Rollins' ice wharf.

The electric cars are doing a big business this week bringing people from South Brewer and the surrounding country to the fair in Bangor.

Messrs. Charles E. Swett, Charles F. Prentiss and R. W. Burr, who are at Chicago visiting the World's Fair, are to spend about two weeks there.

Quite a number of Brewer people who have made exhibits in the fair in Bangor have won premiums, a good portion of which usually come to this city from several departments of the fair.

The next session of Penobscot County Pomona Grange, is to be held with Union Grange, in Hermon, on the fourth Saturday in September. This will be the annual meeting of the County Grange, and the election of officers will occur. A full attendance is especially desired.

This is a busy week for the livery stable keepers, as many people coming from the country to attend the Fair in Bangor leave their teams at the stables during the day and the establishments are filled with horses while the streets outside are lined with carriages of all descriptions.

Nearly all, if not all, of the Brewer people who have been spending the season, or a portion of it, at the seashore have now returned home and returned to the duties from which they have been enjoying a vacation. The summer has been a good one for outings and all have whiled away the weeks and months very pleasantly.

The annual reunion of the Comins family was to be held yesterday at Public Hall, East Eddington. A large gathering was expected, many, intending to be present from other States, besides those living in Eddington and vicinity. The weather was propitious, and the plans had been made for making the event a most enjoyable one, as usual.

Mr. Appleton, of Orland, who had his team stolen in this city Tuesday evening has been fortunate enough to recover it. It was taken by a man named Alec Theestrope and he was caught in Monfague. He was before the Old Town municipal court yesterday and bound over to the Supreme Court and not being able to furnish bonds was brought to Bangor and put in the jail to await his trial.

Mr. Charles Tefft, Brewer's talented young sculptor, has two pieces on exhibition at The Norombega this week. One is the plaster cast of Abraham Lincoln, which we have before referred to as one of his works, and the other is a clay model of a figure entitled "The Captive." Both are fine examples of Mr. Tefft's art and show his wonderful ability and are much admired by the visitors at the hall.

Mr. Charles Newcomb's new tenement house on State street, at the railroad crossing, is rapidly approaching completion. The lathing has been done on the interior and the carpenters have the clapboarding partly done. The plastering will be commenced soon and then the finish will be put on. The house is more roomy and convenient than the one which formerly stood on the site, and is otherwise an improvement over the old structure.

A BOY'S AWFUL DEATH.

Dragged a Mile and a Half by a Runaway Mule.

WILKESBARRE, Aug. 29. Thomas Jones, aged 16 years, of Hughestown, met with a horrible death this morning. He was employed as a driver boy at the Barnum shaft. While taking a mule from the breaker to the blacksmith shop the animal became unmanageable and threw off the boy. The lad in falling had one of his legs caught in the harness. The mule started on a gallop and ran for about one and a half miles, dragging the unfortunate boy all the way. When the mule was stopped nearly all of the boy's clothing had been torn off. The body was horribly bruised and torn, and life was extinct.

The Schooner Crosby.

One of the most terrible tales of suffering from hunger and thirst, together with being almost dashed to atoms by the fiercest hurricanes met with in a sea life of thirty years, was brought to light Tuesday upon the arrival at Philadelphia of the three-masted schooner A. B. Crosby, Captain Sheldrake, from port Spain, with asphaltum.

The water casks, containing the fresh water, had been torn away from the iron girders to which they were fastened to the decks by the tremendous seas which boarded her, and the crew suffered beyond description from thirst. Their sufferings were only alleviated by a heavy rainstorm which was experienced nearly a week later and sufficient water was caught to last until port was reached.

To add to their misery the provisions were all destroyed by salt water, which flooded the cabin, and for nearly ten days they had been subsisting on pancakes made of flour and water.

Upon the arrival of the vessel in port yesterday, the crew presented a forlorn and pitiable appearance. The vessel's decks were swept clean of everything that the power of the seas could possibly wash from its fastenings. The boats were all carried away, the storm was stove in, all the poop stanchions and rails were torn away, and the vessel was leaking badly. She had been kept afloat only by the constant using of the pumps.

Captain Sheldrake said yesterday that he sailed from Port Spain on the 1st inst., and met favorable but light winds which carried him well north to the southward of Hatteras by August 19. "That night the barometer gave indications of a blow and sail was shortened and everything made snug before the midnight watch. When daylight broke the following day, which was Sunday, we were 120 miles south of Hatteras and the wind by this time had assumed all the proportions of a hurricane. The seas were lashed into seething foam and ran to the height of tidal waves, washing over the schooner from every quarter. Some broke over masts and shook the vessel from stem to stern as they tumbled to the decks. It was impossible to attempt to keep the vessel's head to them, as they ran irregularly and tumbled on board of her from every quarter.

"As the morning wore on the storm seemed to be attaining greater force and all on board feared their last hour had come. The helmsman was lashed to his post and the balance of the crew had all they could do to keep from being washed overboard. One huge sea ripped up both water casks filled with water and carried them overboard clear of the lee rails. This same sea burst open the cabinet and filled it with water. The floor was ruined and all the hard bread became musty.

Without water to quench their thirst and subsisting on raw pork and flour sparingly mixed with fresh water these unfortunate men worked their vessel out of one of the severest hurricanes ever yet experienced off the remote Cape Hatteras. Captain Sheldrake used oil to quiet the waters with wonderful success and believes this helped to save the vessel from total destruction and the crew from a watery grave. Had it not been for the heavy rainstorm experienced on the 25th inst., all hands would have been crazed with thirst. Neither Captain Sheldrake nor any of his crew ever before experienced such a thrilling passage.

SKODA'S LITTLE TABLETS Cures Headache and Dyspepsia.

LIGHT OUT OF DARKNESS

By Mrs. HENRY WARD BEECHER.

[Copyright, 1893, by Godey Publishing Company.]

The bond between herself and twin brother was even stronger than when in their home life. No shadow of concealment ever came between them, and without words they seemed to understand each other's hearts instinctively.

When it was time to retire, Rose said. "Stay a moment longer, please. I have a few words to say before retiring.

"I know, my dear parents, you have had much anxiety on my account and many fears that I might not be able to rise above the cruel disappointment that came so suddenly upon me. I do not pretend that I have not suffered very bitterly. But it was the pain of misplaced confidence, the knowledge that what I had thought a priceless treasure was worse than dross, a thing to loathe and scorn. It takes time to banish regrets for such impoverishment, but the love so unutterably squandered can never be renewed. From the hour that Jasper Grenville joined himself to traitors against his country his power over me ceased. He is now a prisoner, taken by a scouting party in the rash attempt to obtain a clandestine interview with me. I am thankful that it did not fall to my brothers to capture him, but it is well that his efforts against our country are ended, at least for the present.

"Lillian, my sister, you look at me in and surprise that I speak of him so coolly. You think me hard and unfeeling."

"Ah, no, Rosie! But I cannot understand how a love so strong as yours was can be so totally annihilated, even if the object prove, as Grenville has, utterly unworthy."

"Ah, dear sister! If this had been of the common order of sin or worthlessness, there might have lingered some shades of tenderness, but for the son who would trample upon his mother, the traitor who would betray and destroy his country, there can exist no feeling but entire indifference. Yes—stronger one than that—detestation."

"And what," interrupted Ralph, "do you imagine that Grenville hoped to gain by a disguised entrance into my sister's presence? Why, to persuade her to leave us and allow the first rebel chaplain to marry them and then convey her to his southern home! Or, if she thought that was asking too much, to secure her promise to be his when the south had subdued us."

"How did you learn this?" asked his father in amazement.

"When captured, he was marched close by our camp and urged his guard to procure an interview with our colonel. Eustace met him and brought back an earnest petition for one word with Rose. Suspecting Grenville imagined our sad reverses had somewhat disheartened us, and that he might also flatter himself that a sight of him would revive her love, our little heroine consented to go with Dunbar. It was well that I was off on a scout. I could not have borne his assurance so quietly as Rose and our Eustace did."

"Well, he understands me now, my dear parents, and will never, I am sure, entertain so wild a hope again. That he suffers I do not doubt, and for the suffering, though deserved, I am sorry. But he chose this crooked path against all our entreaties and has no one to blame but himself. We will not waste this short reunion by any more words of him. I thought it best to tell you this at once, that all the rest of our time might be undisturbed. One of the old good night hymns, papa, if you please, and then we will go to rest that we may be prepared for great pleasure tomorrow."

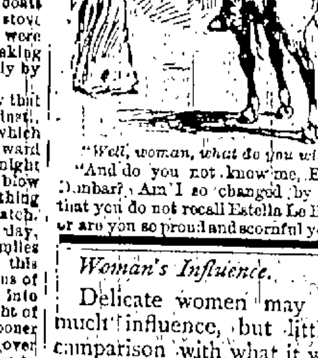

While Rose and Ralph were on their visit home Dunbar had been sent with a strong force to disperse an encampment of rebels who had stationed themselves inconveniently near our lines. He was successful in his mission, had routed them completely and taken many prisoners. During the time that this party waited about the union station they had with them many females of the baser sort, who had often been surprised in attempting to lure our men outside the lines, but great watchfulness and strict regulations had given them little encouragement.

On their way back to camp the next day, having scattered the rebels, a woman, feeble and ragged, came out from the wood near the roadside, holding a dirty rag on a stick as a flag of truce. George, who first noticed her, halted. She advanced and stood before him, earnestly gazing into his face. She could not have been more than 22 or 23 years old and must have once been handsome. Meeting no look of recognition, she dropped her eyes for a moment, then raising them again with a half despairing, half defiant look she said:

"I would speak with your colonel. I have something to say to him."

George galloped to where Dunbar rode and reported this request. The regiment halted at a sign from their commander, who rode back with George to where the figure still remained like a statue, immovable. When they reached her, the searching look which had so disturbed George was fastened on Dunbar's face and with the same result. The men gathered near with looks of wonder, mingled with suspicion, that she might be acting as a decoy to some rebel ambush. She heeded them not nor turned her eyes from Eustace's face as if to compel a recognition. He remained silent, wondering to what this would tend, till, her strangely earnest gaze becoming irksome, he spoke abruptly:

"Well, woman, what do you wish? I have no time to loiter."

"Well, woman, what do you wish?"

"And do you not know me, Eustace Dunbar? Am I so changed by misery that you do not recall Estella Le Barron, or are you so proud and scornful you will not stoop to notice me in my misery and ruin?"

The men with natural delicacy fell back, for there were some among George's company who came from their home and knew of the Le Barron tragedy.

"Oh, Estella! And is it thus I find you? And how came you, with all your faults, among the enemies of your country?"

"I have no country, no friends. The villain for whom I forsook both has cast me out to destruction."

"Estella," interrupted Dunbar when he saw how reckless she was of exposing her own shame, "come with us to our camp, and when there I can procure you a safe and respectable shelter where you can secure kindness and friends even yet if you choose to deserve them. I can no longer remain idle here. Will you come and trust an old friend?"

"I know not where you propose taking me, but I am sick, homeless, starving—I have no choice but submission to your direction."

She was really famishing and too feeble to walk. Eustace saw that food was given her and had her comfortably seated in an ambulance, then hastened their return to camp. To his great joy he learned that Rose and Ralph had just arrived. Rose at once assisted him to convey the wretched woman to the hospital and placed her immediately under the physician's care. The cold, hunger and exposure of the last few days had made fearful inroads upon her constitution. A fever was already upon her, and when the excitement and danger of her wanderings was over she sank under it, and there seemed little hope of her recovery.

Many days of imminent danger and severe suffering elapsed before Rose's kind and skillful nursing and the physician's unremitting attention were rewarded by any symptoms of convalescence, and then, though broken in spirit and weak as a child, her heart was apparently softened and ready to receive the good seed.

One pleasant morning, when first able to converse, she unfolded the history of her course after leaving her father's house. It was a sad and painful story, but unfortunately so common that it needs no repetition. Le Barron's supposed wealth had been De Courtney's attraction, and the same mistaken idea of his high position, dignities and unbounded riches had lured her on to that fatal step. Love had had no voice in this wicked compact. Not until they reached Paris and his draft on Le Barron came back protested did the fortune hunter learn the deceit that she had practiced upon him.

The stormy scene that might have been expected ensued, and then De Courtney informed her that their marriage was all a sham, and that his wealth and titles were equally fictitious. Thus deserted by the man with whom she had fled, not for love, but for selfish ambitions, and left to bear her troubles and disappointments as best she might, her fall was rapid. The money and jewelry she had so wickedly purloined from mother and sister that terrible night she had carefully concealed from De Courtney. For a short time it enabled her to lead a gay life, but with no protector in Paris her associations must of course have been of a class that opened the door to every kind of temptation until at last she sank into abject ignominy and dishonor. In this condition Eustace saw and rescued her from the lowest depths of degradation.

And now, though she rallied for a few weeks, her days were numbered. The physician from the first gave no encouragement of recovery, and after a short period of comparative ease a speedy termination of her ill spent life was certain. When first compelled to realize her precarious situation, she was overwhelmed with terror and despair. The chaplain visited her daily. Under his unwearied teachings and Rose's gentle ministrations the darkness was gradually dispelled, and the hope that she, the most guilty, might find mercy through that atonement so freely offered to all, even the chief of sinners, began to comfort her.

As this hope brightened her heart yearned after friends and kindred. She had only heard vague reports of her father's death and was entirely ignorant of the condition of the other members of her family. It was a great trial to be called upon to reveal to the poor sufferer all the sorrow and shame that had overwhelmed her former home, but after her heart, so long cold and hard, was brought into a better state she would not rest until she had heard every particular. Her gratitude for the kindness that had shielded Robbie and Jennie from temptation was very touching, but Maud's perilous situation weighed keenly upon her mind. Feeling that her own reckless and unprincipled conduct from earliest childhood had led her sister into by and forbidden paths, which had now so blasted her life if not ruined her soul, she begged Eustace to seek out Maud and beseech her by her dying sister's example to seek the better life.

The Newtons, after leaving the city, had very little opportunity to hear of Maud's life. From the first she had steadfastly refused to see her little brother and sister and was even unwilling to receive any message from them, preferring, she said, that all memory of their father's family should die out of their young minds.

They now felt it important to see Maud, if possible, while Eustace was with them, and therefore, acting at once in accordance with their views of duty, Mr. and Mrs. Newton, accompanied by Eustace and Lillian, went next day to the city.

They learned from a friend that after two years of strife and bitterness, death had at last separated this miserable pair. Mr. Varney had been dead but a short time. At his marriage he settled a liberal sum upon his young wife and then made a will leaving her sole possessor of all his wealth at his death. Had she treated the foolish old man with even common kindness he was so infatuated with her beauty he would have made no change. But though she had sold herself and bartered all her hopes of happiness for riches she could not sufficiently control her loathing and contempt to secure that for which she had risked so much.

With his violent temper it took but a few short weeks to open her husband's eyes to his folly and to destroy all affection for and pride in her, and so his maudlin love turned to the bitterest hate. In his dotage he had become like some fierce animal in his anger, and her life was wretched past description. His cruelty she met by biting taunts and the most exasperating language till at length she so outraged him that for her own safety she left the house and went to reside at some fashionable resort.

Mr. Varney had long been failing, and when the excitement of her presence was over he sank rapidly. One of his last acts was to destroy the old will and make a new one, by which he deprived her of everything but what she could legally claim. So when summoned to his dying bed it was to find that the palatial home with its royal furnishings, the spacious grounds and splendid equipages had passed into strangers' hands and was beyond her reach. Her bridal settlement, in itself a fortune, and rich jewelry were all she could call her own.

This will she determined to contest on the ground that Mr. Varney at the time of making it was in no condition to make a valid instrument for the disposal of his property, and that the will that he made at her marriage was still binding. As soon as her husband was buried she sought legal advice, but there was sufficient evidence to prove that he was competent to dispose of his property according to his own wishes, even if the first will had not been destroyed by his own hand before his death. Her conduct had been too widely known for any to sympathize when she was compelled to descend to a humbler but very comfortable home.

Here her old friends sought her. The reader can easily imagine from their insight into Mrs. Varney's character that Mr. and Mrs. Newton were coldly if not rudely received. It was maddening to her proud spirit that these whose counsel she had despised should now find her so far beneath the position she then aimed at. When Mr. Newton apologized for calling by saying he had some information to communicate respecting her eldest sister, she positively refused to hear a word, charging Estella with the ruin of all the hopes she had ever nourished, saying that but for her, mother, and sister, long before her father's death, she might have been transferred to a peaceful, happy home, blessing and being blessed, instead of the wretched being she now was. Whatever Estella had suffered or was suffering, whatever her fate might be, she richly deserved all that could befall her, and from herself Estella need expect no pity.

Even while so rudely speaking, it was evident that her heart was gradually softening—perhaps a little comforted by the sight of those who had always shown her kindness. Poor, desolate Maud! A gentle word, a kindly voice she had seldom heard since she so abruptly left these same friends on the morning of her ill fated marriage.

Mrs. Newton saw that it was best to wait patiently till the overburdened heart had had time to pour out the wild, vengeful feelings it had so long harbored. All self control seemed swept away, and in her ravings—for truly it was little less—it was evident she had never forgotten her early love. Her pride, the shame of Sherwood's knowing of her father's crimes, had driven her from him into this rash marriage, thinking that with Varney's wealth she could close her heart against that love.

Vain thought! Every day by contrast she had loved the nobler nature that might have been hers more fondly instead of forgetting, and hardly conscious of the sin had begun to look forward to the time when her husband's death should leave her a rich widow as one more chance to win back her former lover, forgetting that her whole course, so publicly manifested, must have destroyed all Sherwood's respect and love. When at length conscious that her imprudent language had revealed all this to her friends with her, for a moment she was greatly shocked and alarmed, but suddenly all pride forsook her, and she burst into wild, hysterical weeping.

Mrs. Newton tenderly soothed her, and when, exhausted by the struggle, she quietly sobbed with her friend's arm lovingly around her. Then they quietly led the conversation back to Estella. Seeing indications of another outbreak, Mr. Newton beckoned Dunbar from the carriage, and in a few impressive words he narrated his meeting with Estella, sick, starving and deserted.

Before he had concluded Maud was again weeping, but softer, more unselfish, more human tears, than before. Eustace urged her to go with him and see her sister and be reconciled before her death. To this she would not consent, but the violence of her anger had passed, and when, hoping if left to think alone she might relent, Mrs. Newton rose to leave the poor child cordially thanked her for her kindness and expressed a hope that she might see her again.

The day before Dunbar and George left Mrs. Newton received a grateful letter from Mrs. Varney, inclosing one for Estella, with the request that the colonel would carry it to her. He did so and had the satisfaction of learning that it contained a confession of her own doings and free forgiveness of Estella's sins toward herself, with the assurance that she was determined to try to lead a better life. She spoke tenderly of Mr. Newton's family and hoped to be still remembered by them. This letter was a great joy to Estella, who died a few days after, leaving Rose comforted with the hope that the poor girl's iniquities had been pardoned and her sins blotted out.
